

Lesson #2 : Our Actions, When They Hurt or Kill One of Their Own

Amid an ongoing surge in violence in Iraq, Maj. Mark Bieger, the operations officer for the 1st Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment, emerged from the scene of double insurgent bombings in Mosul with a fatally wounded girl in his arms, April 2005

"... This war is flooded with human nature."

From an unknown American Soldier, in a letter home, World War I

"The world is witnessing first hand, live on television, the hearts of American warriors -- and the spirit and pride only displayed by magnificent young men and women who are volunteers in the fight for the cause of freedom. It's all about heart."

by Colonel. A.J. Stewart, 71st Flying Training Wing commander

